

LLM by course work: Policy on fulfilling the requirement to graduate in respect of research paper evaluations

In order to graduate, a course-based LLM student must take five additional half courses in the area. At least two of those additional courses must be at the 600 level and at least two of these additional five half courses must have research paper evaluations.

In order to qualify as a research paper evaluation the research paper component must count for at least 50% of the grade in the course.

In order to graduate you will need to complete this form.

I,

completed research paper evaluations (as defined above) in the following courses [list courses and indicate the weight attached to the research evaluation in each course]
