

SUPREME COURT OF CANADA CHECKLIST FOR U OF C APPLICANTS – PART 3 REFERENCES

2027-2028 Clerkship Program – October 24, 2025 Update

Please provide this checklist to your potential referees. Note that professors who are currently teaching you courses may not be willing to commit to providing a reference until they see how you have performed in your fall course(s) with them. Professors are encouraged to accept or decline as soon as they are able, so that the candidate may secure another reference if needed.

- Preferably, your references should be from professors of law or legal professionals who have supervised your work. Three are required of this nature.
- One of your references will be from our Dean of Law, which is your fourth reference.

Content of Supreme Court of Canada Reference Letters

- The Supreme Court of Canada indicates that one or more letters of reference should attest to your academic excellence, effective interpersonal skills, ability to work under pressure and ability to work as part of a team. All clerkship references should speak to your legal analysis, writing and research ability.
- Regarding academic excellence, the Faculty has noted that speaking to a student's high academic ability in a class and how this comparatively stands out in the current academic cohort of students, and even with past cohorts, can be helpful for the Court. References for the Supreme Court of Canada are often more than one page in length.
- The letters should be signed and, if possible, prepared on official letterhead.
