Program FAQs

Who can hire an innovation intern?

Thus far our employers have included legal service providers, law firms (big law and boutique), legal institutes and the Courts. Any organization in the legal profession, or working at the intersection of legal and tech, that is looking to innovate, improve efficiencies, create new opportunities, or maximize effectiveness can benefit from the work of a keen UCalgary Law student who has received foundational training in this sphere.

What qualities and skills make a successful intern?

Across the board, employers have provided positive feedback about UCalgary Law interns. When recruiting interns, qualities such as initiative, problem solving and analytical skills, teamwork, interpersonal skills, oral communication, and a sincere interest in innovation are all criteria to consider.

Training provided by UCalgary Law to all Interns

It will be mandatory for all interns to complete the Innovation Internship Training taking place as a series of virtual lunch and learns, commencing the first week of the internship and taking place throughout the summer. In this training, students will be provided with a broad overview of legal innovation, process improvement, design thinking, project management, technology and the business of law. Students will also receive coaching support through the summer, be engaged in case study work, and hear from guest speakers who are immersed in innovation. The training is paid for by UCalgary Law.

Employers are asked to please facilitate training by allotting work hours to students' participation.

The knowledge students gain through our Innovation Intern Training Program provides a strong foundation for student interns to work on your innovation projects. Both students and employers have spoken highly about the value this training provides.

In addition, all Innovation Law interns will be required to become certified on the Legal Technology Assessment \(LTA\), through Procertas, prior to commencement of their internships. The LTA is a benchmarked assessment and training platform for various software used in the legal industry including Word, Contract and Excel. Many interns have commented on how this training has increased their efficiency at work. UCalgary Law will also pay for this training.

Hiring Details & Funding

Who hires the intern(s)?

Employers will be responsible for hiring interns.

What is the duration of the internship and what are students paid?

Employers are asked to commit to offering a UCalgary Law Innovation Internship for a 16-week period. The pay should be a minimum of $16,000 for that 16-week period. Employers may make arrangements to have interns start earlier if the student's academic schedule facilitates this. The May 4, 2026 (or earlier) start date will facilitate the training provided.

Is funding available?

Employers may be eligible for various governmental funding programs. Employers have been successful in accessing governmental funding for their summer students in previous years. Employers are responsible for applying for their own funding.

Funding sources taken advantage by employers have included the following.

TECHNATION Canada - Career Ready Program

technationcanada.ca/en/future-workforce-development/career-ready-program

- In the past they have provided multiple employers in this program wage subsidies of 50% to 70% for tech-immersive student roles.
- Last year they implemented a new process whereby applications are reviewed within a window of time, open for a week or two. Please watch for the launch of this year's process for full details as processes can change from year to year.
- We anticipate the summer application period to be around mid-March. Watch for updates on their website.
- Note that employers apply for this wage subsidy program after you have made an offer and a student has accepted.

For questions about the Career Ready program through TECHNATION, contact:

Magnet Funding

swpprogram.ca

- Our program is now designated as a Work-Integrated Learning (WIL) program at the University of Calgary which will allow you to access funds through that route, as well.
- One employer took advantage of this funding late in the last cycle.

Please note that other summer student funding may be available through other programs. Employers will be responsible for searching out options and deadlines on their own.
